

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A gardening rake comprises a grip, extended poles and rake head, of which the extended poles are provided at one end of the grip. The rake heads are mounted at the end of the extended poles and constructed of several spaced talons. The features include: The talons of rake heads are designed with T-shape. Based upon this modified structure, the double-headed rake heads can grab or rake off foreign materials via the clamping devices, thus offering an ease-of-use.